Our candidates have done and are doing their entire duty to themselves, to their party, and to the country, they speak often and eloquently, presenting startling facts and powerful arguments to the minds of the people: and yet the Democracy, though wholly coundent of the rectitude of their position and certainly resolved to main tain it at the risk, if necessary, even of death itself, seem scarcely to give one hour from their daily avocations to securing the indispensable means of triumph This is imprudent. It is wrong. It is unpatriotic. It is scarcely less than criminal. It is an unaccountable phenomenon. It amazes us.

Of course we expect, in spite of apathy and the want of organization, a very decided Democratic victory, but in all probability it will be a far less signal one than we might make it and of course should make it. leave off the dark, heavy clothing, which has become intolerable with the fine days. What is the reason, by the way, that winter clothing is made so heavy? Why can it not be made light, as well as warm? Feathers are light, fur is light, yet both are very warm, and why could we not have goods manufactured for winter wear which would be warm, yet light enesigh to save the weight which now requires all the strength of ordinary women to carry? Undoubtedly, it will come some of these days—but, in the meantime, women die under the burden of their clothes. A great deal has been said about the unusual beauty and novelty of the dress goods this season, but, although there are some that are very beautiful, there are few that are very beautiful, there are few that are novel. can it not be made light, as well as warm

The importations are, I think, nusually light, and include, as yet, not a single fabric with which we are not perfectly familiar here. August Belmont and two other ladies. It is not at all a heavy fabric, yet it is too warm for summer; so we shall probably have to wait now for it until next fall, when it will be used largely for ladies' and children's suits.

There is another English material, which we ought to have here, in abun-which we ought to have here, in abmi-dance, but which is scarcely ever seen. This is serge. It is excellent for travel-ing dresses, especially to the lakes or the mountains—as it neither shrinks nor grows limp, and is equally servicable to ladies who live in the country, who have to ride a good deal, and who are exposed all sorts of weather. o all sorts of weather.

Remember that anything is better for a traveling or useful dress than a mixture—a really good, houest, cotton dress is far better—and that the delicate light gray rines, with little stripes and other fasci-natious in silk and linen, silk and wool, cotton and wool and the like, are all a de-

One of the very nicest materials for traveling dresses—apart from checked washing silk, which is always good and lady-like—is pure mohair; not that usually sold under the name of alpaca, but the gennine article; fine, close, and without any surface gloss. The only goods we have seen of this kind are checked in black, hair lines clustered upou white grounds. No temperature affects these goods; they wash like white cotton cloth, and, if ironed carefully upon the under stockings, "forever," but that need not be considered a fault, because, when they have doue duty one or more seasons, they are still good to give away. The ight summer silks are all in tripes of small chine patterns. Narrow, haded stripes or one shaded and the oth

That statement isn't true. There's no more of the odor of truth about it than there is of sanctity about Satan. It is a falsehood without so much as a rag or a fig-leaf to cover its nakedness. And it put a guard upon its tongue or he lig-leaf to cover its nakedness. And it comes for gauze and lace burnous, which We presume that this warning to doesn't even, like Powers' Greek Slave, promise to be as fashionable as ever. The great effort is made to give an appearance of distinction to the new summer silk cloaks by fine and claborate trimming, but, though it is admirable in itself, it is only detail after all, and adds nothing to the grace of outline.

Very narrow folds and rouleaux of black satin, with a fine silk embroidery braid unning through the centre, are the mosfashionable decoration for black silk sacs and paletots. Some of these have the ad-dition of lace and some of tringe upon the edge and across the top of the slee Nearly all are trimmed leugthwise upon ne back. Some with lines or narrow olds, commencing close at the back of the cck and widening out into a fan-shape the bottom of the garments; others forming sash ends, which descend selow the edge of the skirt, or forming a simple barbe-like ornament for the seams.

One of the features of the new cloaks consists of narrow standing bands for the throat scolloped out on the upper edge. These are arranged to wear with the nar-The state arright to wear with the nar-row lace neckties which are now in vogue. Another feature is the wide flowing sleeves, which it must be said are rather out of place in conjunction with short and close, though not tight-fitting garments. The style most in vogue is straight down he centre of the back, but cut in a little npon the side seams. This shapes it a rifle, without fitting it to the figure.

A very new idea in trimming, in fact the last degree.

The Polish sacs are the prettiest styles in cloth for spring promenade wear. They are made in handsome light tweeds, and trimmed only with large Buttous, chased silver, opal enamelled or the Italian

They will also be applique embroidery. They will also be favorite yachting jackets, the design, in-stead of a scapulary and the like, being anchors and other usutical cublems, with outtons to match.
The most admired summer suits are made of delicate chees, or very narrow striped silk in two colors—the trimming consisting always of narrow cross-cut folds of sila in the contrasting color. The method generally adopted now is to cut the dress skirt the correct (short) length and simulate the petticont with the triuming. Soractimes, however, the petticont is made white mohair, and trimmed with folds of silk to match the dress.

It may be interesting to some of our eaders to know that there are several distinet shapes in the wide, flowing sleeves. The first and most common of them is La Juive, a revival of the old pagoda; the next is the Polish sleeve, which is cut straight, and open to the top of the arm; then there is the l'entilleme, which is open to just above the elbow in the inside seam, and the fourth is the Russian sleeve, closed military jacket cuff dangling at

INDIA AND PAISLEY SHAWLS.

These two kinds of shawls are always cial position and good taste of the wearer. Pure cashmere shawls yearly become more scarce and difficult to obtain, the produc-tion being limited and the demand constantly increasing. The price advances with great rapidity, so fast that a lady recently obtained for her India shawl, which had been worn six years, two hundred dollars more than she paid for it.

It is not generally known that an im mense business is done in the purchase and sale of second-hund India shawls. Three fourths of those which come to this country have been worn in India, England ountry have oeen worn in India, England in France, and here again they are bought and frequently sold back again to the deal-rat a trille less. or, as in the instance itied above, a trille more than they cost. Much depends on some trick or form or coloring which happens to affect the fash-on. Sounctimes thank sometimes refer to the control of the co ion. Sometimes black, sometimes red, and sometimes white centres to lines of coloring are the rage, and it the shawl to be sold fulfills that particular condition, and is also fine and in good condition, it vill bring nearly a new price.

Our new nobility are willing sometimes o psy a higher price for an old Cashmere nawl, which has been remarkably fine, han for a new one, in order to be able to boast of it as an heirloom (!)—heaven help them!—when probably any respected maternal ancestor that they may have had considered herself well off to own a good plaid woolen one.

A large business is done in such estab-lishments as A. T. Stewart's in altering and remodeling old India shawls and scarfs; in supplying new centres and fringes of the fashionable color; incleans-ing, darning, and furnishing new bits to inserted or new corners for them. cannot make the entire shawl in this con try, but there are girls who can embroide and make pieces or small gores, which can rarely be detected even by a connois

A few years ago the price of an India shawl tarely exceeded a thousand dollars, and we have heard experienced salesmen declare that beyond that price it was almost impossible to discover a shade difference in the quality. Now, they are appartly reach three thousand dollars and mently reach three thousand dollars, and thousand is not an impossible sum for shawl for one poor, weak woman's c. One would think it would break under it.

The most distinguished Paisley shawls sre now made with black centres and black fringe, and many ladies are having their white centers replaced by black ones, an economical change when the white ones have become soiled, as they can be taken out, washed, and used for other pur-poses, or a price will be allowed for them.

NOTHINGS. The newest black veils are simple ace, the sides cut in slightly, so that the four corners form four points, each finish-ed with jet pendants, the weight of which bolds the veil in its place. "Reins" or streamers at the back are as much worn as ever, but they are now in silk, or of the materials trimmed, instead of ribbon, and the hanging loops are avoided altogether. Upon some very handsome black sill cloaks, they are simulated in embroidery The "La Petit" sash is a novelty for very young ladies, to be worn with white Swiss or organdie dresses. It coasists o a square bit of blue or pink silk, to which long sash ends are attached, tied down in wide bows upon the skirt behind. Bib and sash are edged with a notched out ruching of the silk. The bib is fastened apon the front of the body, which is cut low, the same as a bib apron. Gloves for evening wear are now very long, extending far upon the arm. With ordinary evening dress, they are a mere affectation. They are intended to form a part of a strictly 'Earpire' costume, and only with the anthe "I'reemasons' apron," is now made in a net-work of heads, with fringe attached for rich evening and dinner dresses.

About the Planets?

Such is the immensity of space between us, and the nearest planetary body, it seems almost impossible in the present state of knowledge to make much progress in regard to the exact structure or physical condition of any of the solar group. However, telescopes are constantly revealing great and unlooked for things in regions above the sky and it is by no in regions above the sky, and it is by no means improbable that astounding discov-eries are destined to crown with illustrious fame some bold genius in a coming day that may entirely eclipse those which are now recorded among the grandest achieve-ments of the human intellect. A SHOCKING TRAGEDY-A GIRL AC CIDENTALLY SHOT AND KILLED BY A YOUNG MAN. Between 4 and 5 o'clock esterday afternoon, a most deplora cident occurred near the corner of Twen-ty-first and Herbert streets, resulting in the almost instant death of a young girl named Lizetta Brinkman. So far as we were able to collect the particulars yester

About the hour named, a number of coung people were enjoying themselves in the open air on Twenty-first street, near in the open air on Twenty-first street, near Herbert. Among those present were a pretty young German girl named Lizetta Brinkman and August Klanke, a respectable young man, with whom she was well acquainted. While the young people were amusing themselves, Lizetta threatened, in jest, to throw something at Klanke, who playfully simulated fear, and warned her not todo it. An old rusty gun was lying in a corner against the fence, which Klanke caught up in sport and said, "Now, if you throw I'll shoot," or some words to that effect, and with his fuger on the trigger presented the muzzle toward the trigger presented the muzzle toward the girl, not knowing that the weapon was loaded. In a moment the gun was dis-charged and the whole charge of number four shot struck the ill-fated maiden is the face. The harrowing scene of con-sternation and harror which ensued can better be imagined than depicted. With may the young man hurled away the gru, sprang to the side of the fallen girl, and lifting her up carried her into the house and laid her on a lounge. CRITICISM.

A difficult matter is Criticism, and how few there are who do not set up for critics. It is right and natural that every one should think for themselves. A man without an opinion would not be worth knowing, he would give in to everyone, acknowledge every argument, and change his mind as often as this picture or that were set before him. It is so easy to set up for a critic, to pass an opinion, but it is not so easy to carn the late of just. To criticise fairly, late by mote and forward the good, rather than to condemn the bad—to guide the beautiful, rather than to demolish the ugly. The criticism that scorches with sarcasm and scares with irony, that stings with jealonsy, and cuts deep with the lash, is productive of more harm than good. It snips the bud of genius, it paralyses the hand and heart of the criticised, it bars the way to rogress, and deters more than it benefit riticism should be kindly, but nd, while it discovers faults, sho verlook what is meritorious. A paper was read at a recent meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of Bradford, England, by Jacob Behrens, Esq., from which we extract the following:
France, Belgium, Italy, and Switzerland have, on the 25rd December, 1875, concluded a treaty, in consequence of which they have practically adopted the 20-france piece as their common measure of value. The Emperor of the French takes advantage of the Great Exhibition to carry on the work so auspiciously he French takes advantagy or a suspiciously sibition to carry on the work so suspiciously commenced, and for this purpose has invited delegates from the whole world to meet at delegates from the whole world to meet at delegates from the whole world to meet at Paris, and to discuss the best means for es-tablishing a universal medium of exchange, without necessarily changing the unit of each country's enrency. It is believed that the United States are not un willing to reduce the value of their dellar (now worth five france value of their dellar (now worth five franca seventeen centimes) so just five franca. Spain is said to show equal; endiness, and Anstria has already given notice to Prussia of her intention to withdraw from the German Munrerin, evidently with the view of adopting the French system. Anstria will probably maintain her gulden (worth two frances 59), the United States the dollar (five franca). Russia the rubel (four france). Germany the thaker & 1/4 france). The necessity of soon abandoning their silver standard will prob-ably induce Germany and Holland to introably induce Germany and Holland to intro-duce a gold currency; and thus it cannot fail that the 20-frane gold piece, or its representa-tive, will at no distant date become a legal tender all over the Continent of Europe and America. England has not yet shown any inclination to take part in a discussion which will probably fix the basis of a universal counses.

If, on the other hand, France be is need of gold, the Bank of England may have sovereigns to spars, which would then be as available for circulation on the Continent as the 20-francpieces were in England in the former case. This plan has, at all events, the recommendation of simplicity and of being immediately applicable without interfering with any existing interests, and it has the collateral advantage of being a useful stepping-stone to a referm of the present disgraceful state of weights and measures by familiarising the English mind with the great advantages of the decimal system as applied to curren-

It is frightful to contemplate the bold-ess with which crimes of the most heinous character are being daily perpetrated all over the country. Indiana, particu-larly, of late seems to-be the choseu and successful theater of acts of villainy that have few parallels for atrocity in the criminal annals even of half civilized countries. We receive scarcely a paper that does not contain accounts of one or murders, rapes, robberies, or ar-And this carnival of crime seems to the dark record; and in some locales the people live in coustant dread. We this morning have to record another endish murder, perpetrated in the town Gosport, Owen county, on the line of sville, New Albany, and Chicago ilroad. At 10:15 o'clock last night, the ation and telegraph agent at Gosport, emes S. John, telegraphed the passage of the freight train coming south. This is he freight train coming south. This is he last heard of him alive. At an early our this morning, some children, in pass-ng the depot, looked into the window of c office of the agent, and saw Mr. John ated and leaning against the wall, with s skull crusbed in, and the brains and blood oozing from the wound. He was lead-murdered. There is no certainty how Mr. John was billed; but the supposition is that the talal wounds were inflicted with a heavy or piece of iron. It is believed that his home, distant several hun-

ed yards from the depot, and that about time he was leaving, the office was tered by thieves for the purpose of rol-og it of about two hundred and forty dollars, belouging to the railroad compa-ny, which it was probably known Mr. John had in his possession. He donbtless re-sisted the thieves in their attempted robery, as he was a man of known courage nd nerve. In order to obtain the money This terrible crime has created the most tense excitement at Gosport and in the eighboring country. Mr. John was wide-eighboring country. Mr. John was wide-y known; he was a gentleman of the most uniable social qualities, and was highly steemed by all who knew him. THE LOUISVILLE JOURNAL

The Journal's political character and standing are known everywhere and to the United States. Acknowledged as one State and Union for near forty years, it ple. It has been uniformly consistent to all the blessings of peace, prosperity, efforts it has recognized no distinction of sections, but devoted itself to the whole country, thereby incurring the disapprobation of a part of the States, but nltimately winning the favorable verdict and the applanse of all. No paper in the country has ministered less to sectional feeling. In all its views, it has been broad, literal, and catholic.

The Constitution of our Fathers, nuperverted and undistorted by selfish politicians and postilent demagogues, has been the star to which we have looked as that of the nation's destiny, and by its calm, majestic, and sacred light we shall continue to be guided through all the calms and storms that may be before us. In whatever conflicts we may take part, our first, our last, and our only efforts will be given to the maintenance of the Conit, the good order of society, and the equal rights and privileges of the entire people of the Republic. If we have failed to instil such principles into the minds and of a sad casualty in Early county: of a and casualty in Early county:

Some two weeks ago, two brothers by the name of Webb were engaged in turkey hunting on Spring Creck, in Early county, when the unfortunate man, Allen Gay, Jr., together with a Mr. Evaus, entered the same hammock from another direction—also engaged with their fowling pieces in the turkey hunt. Both Gay and Webb being experienced in the scarch for this valuable game, they were enabled to imitate the peculiar noise of the turkey to perfection. The thickness of the growth The thickness of the growth perfection. The thickness of the growth prevented their discovering cach other, and each, mistaking the other for game, cantionsly approached the decoying noise, little thinking of the imminent peril of their respective situations. A portion of Mr. Gay's clothing was at length seen through an opening in the brush wood, and the other aveiled with the prevented. and the other, excited with the prospect of a fine haul, instantly fired at the sup-posed game, and ran toward the object in
